Elevating Hygiene in Unexpected Places

Designed by award-winning architects, BuckleyGrayYeoman, 55 Wells Street features 1,425 square metres of modern, fully fitted office space. Located in the heart of London's eclectic, commercial-residential Fitzrovia district, the building's neighbours include world renowned brands like Facebook, Netflix and the BBC.

Considering evolving design expectations in conjunction with the building's location and tenant base, hygiene was a key objective for its washrooms. Since the COVID-19 pandemic began, new best practices have emerged in washroom design, including utilising touchless products and providing additional wellness amenities. At 55 Wells Street, Bobrick combination units help elevate hygiene inside toilet cubicles.

Reducing Touchpoints. Supporting Health & Peace of Mind.

Typical toilet cubicle interiors contain several surfaces and touchpoints that may contribute to disease transmission and germ transfer. In many toilet compartments, users may touch door handles and latches, toilet tissue dispensers and flush buttons, all in a single trip. At 55 Wells Street, Bobrick B-36903 TrimLineSeries™ Recessed Paper Towel Dispenser/Waste Bins were installed in the cubicle interiors, providing users with paper towels for touching surfaces and easily disposing of waste.

The recessed combination units project only 14mm from the dividing walls, keeping the accessory's footprint to a minimum while ensuring the toilet compartments remain accessible for all users. The satin-finish stainless steel unit dispenses 300 C-fold or 400 multifold paper towels and includes a removable, leak-proof 6.1-L waste container for simple servicing.

At 55 Wells Street, the B-36903 paper towel dispensers/waste bins complement a range of hygiene amenities to help support user health, safety and peace of mind.

INTO THE FOLD

Recessed, folded paper towel dispensers like Bobrick's B-36903 provide faster dispensing compared to roll towel dispensers and deliver minimalist, low-profile aesthetics.
